than not" to mean that, upon consideration of all the relevant evidence, a preponderance of the evidence supports a finding that the respondent engaged in a sanctionable practice.

10. Burden of proof Under Section III.A, sulparagraph 8.02(b)(ii) of the Sanctions

- 14. Fraud allegation 2: INT alleges that the Responde failed to disclose fees paid or to be paid to the Consultants at the Respondents ngaged to provide services related to the execution of the Contract.
- 15. Sanctioning factorsINT contends that aggravation is warranted for the repetition of fraudulentacts and harm to the ProjeckIthough the Respondents provided some documentation, made their employees available for interview, and responded to INT's inquiries, stress that any mitigation applied for cooperation should be considered in lighther Respondents' categorical denial of culpability despite evidence to the contrary
  - B. The Respondent's Principal Contentions in the Explanation and the Response
- 16. Fraud allegation 1:The Respondestacknowledge that they did not make any conflict-of-interest disclosures They argue that there was no conflict of interest bectatues hareholdes 2.13% stake in the First Responded to not confer power or control over the First Responded the Shareholder's financial success had no impact on the First Respondent's corporate interests. The Respondents argue that they did not knowingly or recklessly commit a misrepresentation, considering that there is no evidence that any of their relevant team members knew of the Shareholder's status as a shareholder, as none of these individuals welce dightembers of management; and at the team leader was just a freelance consultand dition, the Respondents contend that the top ten shareholders of a publicated company like the First Respondent could only be identified as of the record date; and that is no evidence that anyone in the team could have concluded that a 2.13% shawenership was or could be perceived as a conflict of interest requiring disclosure.

engaged in a misrepresentation. Specifically, INT submits that the Respondents knew that they hired and intended to pay the Consultants even before bidding for the Consultant argues that, at the veryleast the Respondents knew of the risk of making false statements yet took no steps to address this risconcerning both fraud allegations, INT contends that the Respondents intended to influence the selection process and execution of the Contract that they might not have been awarded the Contract had they disclosed the relevant facts.

20. Sanctioning factorsINT argues that ither the Respondents serve aggravation for the repetition of the misrepresentations the two separate fraudulent practices chement its wn base sanctionINT furthermaintains that the Respondents' conflict interest prompted the PMU to mobilize a new consultant, delayed the DBE nder process, and expose attiprocess to financial and reputational harminally, INT submits that the espondents deserve mitigation for

- 28. The relevant provision in the RFP imposes a disclosure obligation covering "any situation of actual or potential conflict that impacts [the consultant's] capacity to serve the best interest of its [c]lient." The Contract contains a similar provision that encompasses "any situation of actual or potential conflict that impacts their capacity to serve the best interest of their [c]lient, or that may reasonably be perceived as having this effect." The RFP, cthteract, and subsequent disclosure obligations at later stages of the procure predessfor the DBO required written certifications with respect to actual, potential reasonably perceived conflicts of interest. These certifications are important to rimbain the confidence of all parties and observers in the integrity of the procurement process and particularly the award process resulting from bid evaluations. It is essential that all parties involved in a bidding process and in undertaking bid evaluations systems in place to identify, declared manage actual, potential reasonably perceived conflicts of interest.
- 29. The Sanctions Board interprets the disclosure obligations in the RFP accentaged as encompassing not only situations that demonstrate actual or potential conflict of interest, but also those that may be reasonably perceived as affecting the Responderative to serve the best interests of the PMU. These best interests include upholding the integrity of the procurement process by ensuring that all bidders, potential bidders other stakeholders and beneficiaries have confidence in the procurement process and that the process sparent, impartial and accountable.
- 30. The Respondents were tasked under the Contractsisist the PMU in the prequalification process, bidding, negotiation award of the DBO for a wastewater treatment plant in white the These tasks are much part of the core business of the Respondents, whitehextensive experiencewith such assignments, including ank-financed projects. At relevant times the Shareholder was the only shareholder that was not a financial institution or investment vehicle in the First Respondent's publicly disclosed list of its top ten "Major Shareholde hee Shareholder's core business activities included lementing large contracts to design and build water and wastewater management systems ecircumstances thus reated a risk of a reasonable perception on the part of third parties, such as other bidders or potential bidders, that the Respondents' impartiality in carrying out their duties might be affected. Moreover, the Respondents' failure to disclose the relationship deprived the PMU of the opportunity to take a view on the matter and to manage or mitigate the situation
- 31. Because the Sanctions Board fouthalt INT sufficiently established that the Respondents more likely than not committed a misrepresentation burden shifts to the Respondents to demonstrate that heir nondisclosure did not amount to a misrepresentation. The Respondents argue in their defense that the hard-holder's ownership of 2.13% of the First Respondent's shares does not confer power or control over the First Respondent the Shareholder's financial success had no impact on the First Respondent's corporate interest finding a conflict interest in this case would set an arbitrary and unworkable standard for Bank contracts. The Sanctions Boardinds no merit in these arguments that, the disclosure obligation ander the RFP and the Contract are broadencompassing actual, potential, or reasonably perceived conflicts of interest. The disclosure obligation is not triggered lely by the existence of control impact on corporate interest second, the laim that the Respondents did not consider the Shareholder's 2.13% shareholding as affecting in the respondent of the part of determinative The Sanctions Board hapreviously held that a bidder's subjective assessment as to the impact of a conflict of interest does not determine whether such a conflict must be disclosed. As explained in the preceding paragraph, the disclosure obligation in this partial was triggered by, interalia, the nature of the Shareholder's core business activities and the Respondents'specific tasks under the Contractaken together, these circumstances nay reasonably be perceived as affecting the Respondents pacity to serve the best interests of the PMU. Finally, the Sanctions Board does not agree with the Respondents' supplication and unworkable standard for the Barceiven the sensitivity of the Respondents' role in the DBO tender processbest practices all for regular and continuous conflicts checks to avoid any appearance of potential biathe Sanctions Board notes that disclosting Respondents' potential reasonably perceived conflict of interest would not have automatically barred them from participating in the selection process for the Contract or from carrying out their duties thereunder. Rather, the disclosure would have provided as harm to the integrity of the Bank's procurement process due to false or <code>imigsleadd</code> documents—but nevertheless failed to act to mitigate that <code>%isWith</code> respect to disclosure obligationsin particular,the Sanctions Board has held that a respondent's experience as a bidder and the apparent importance of the relevant disclosure requirement may support a finding that the omission of the disclosure <code>wast</code> a minimum reckless. The Sanctions Boardas also found a respondent to have been at least reckless in omitting required information when the record showed no evidence of internal due diligence, discussion, or correspondence to suggest that the disclosure requirements had been considered close The import of these precedents applies here.

35. First, given the Respondents ast experience in undertaking bid preparation and evaluation activities and in participating in Barfknanced projects they should have been aware that it is critical to maintain the integrity of procurement and selection processes, and fth falling disclosure obligations carefully fthsug(s)-1 (r-2 (ge)-1 but)-1 (pa)-1 .1 (20 (ha)-0.00.002 Tc 0.083 Tw 0 attempted to mislead a party when it failed to disclose its potential bnably perceived conflict of interest.

- c. To obtain a financial or otherenefit or to avoid an obligation
- 38. The Sanctions Board has consistently held that, wthererecord demonstrates that a misrepresentation was made in response to a tender requirements in the case of conflictifinterest disclosures the intent to obtain a benefit or avoid an obligationary be inferred. As discussed in Paragraps, the RFP and the Contractontain similar language providing that consultant's failure to disclose actual or potential conflict impacts the consultant's capacity to serve the best interest of the client, that may reasonably be perceived as having this effect may lead to consultant disqualification, contractmination, and/r Bank sanctions. Further, as discussed in Paragraps, the Respondents' failure to disclose ith potential perceived conflict of interest with the Sharehold eprived the PMU of the opportunity consider the matter and to take appropriate tion thereon
- 39. On the basis of this record, and consistent with precedent, the Sanctions Board finds that it is more likely than not that the Respondents engaged in the misrepresentation with the intent to obtain a benefit
  - 2. Fraud allegation 2: Alleged misspresentation of payments made to third parties

- 41. In their defense, the Respondents conditional that they were not required to disclose their payments to the Consultants because these payments were not commissionations that relate to the proposal or contract execution, which pertinitisesigning and finalization of the Contract rather than itsperformance. According to the Respondents, even if contract execution means contractual performance, the Consultants provided services that fell outside the scope of services under the Contract becase these companies supported the Second Respondent and not the Contract. Finally, the Respondents submit that the Consultants were not subconsultants subject to the same disclosure.
- 42. The Sanctions Board has generally interpreted various disclosure obligatin procurement/selection documents and contracts quite broadly and has consistently rejected attempts by respondents to attribute narrow or specialized interpretations to certain terms. Consistent with precedent, the Sanctions Board declines to the disclosure obligations set out in the RFP and the Contract make it clear that the disclosure obligation encompasses any fees manual account to the contract make it clear that the disclosure obligation encompasses any fees manual account to the contract make it clear that the disclosure obligation encompasses any fees manual account to the contract make it clear that the disclosure obligation encompasses any fees manual account to the contract make it clear that the disclosure obligation encompasses any fees manual account to the contract make it clear that the disclosure obligation encompasses any fees manual account to the contract make it clear that the disclosure obligation encompasses any fees manual account to the contract make it clear that the disclosure obligation encompasses any fees manual account to the contract make it clear that the disclosure obligation encompasses any fees manual account to the contract make it clear that the disclosure obligation encompasses any fees manual account to the contract make it clear that the disclosure obligation encompasses any fees manual account to the contract make it clear that the disclosure obligation encompasses any fees manual account to the contract make it clear that the disclosure obligation encompasses any fees manual account to the contract make it clear that the disclosure obligation encompasses are contract.

d. Cooperation

- 62. Section III.A, subparagraph 9.02(e) of the Sanctions Procedures provides for mitigation where a respondent "cooperated in the investigation or resolution of the case." Section V.C of the Sanctioning Guidelines identifies a respondent's assistance with INT's investigration untary restraintfrom bidding on Bankinanced tenders as examples of cooperation.
- Assistance and/or ongoing cooperation: Section, sub-paragraph 9.02(e) of the Sanctions Procedures provides for mitigation where a respondent "cooperated in the investigation or resolution of the case." Section.C.1 of the Sanctioning Guidelines provides that mitigation may be appropriate for assistance and/or ongoing cooperation, "[b]ased on INT's representation that the respondent has provided substantial assistance in an investigation," with consideration of the "truthfulness, completeness, reliability of any information or testimony, the nature and extent of the assistance, and the timeliness of assistance." In this case, INT acknowledges that the Respondents provided documents, made employees as a fatarbinterview, and responded to written inquiries. The Respondents argue that they fully cooperated with INT, highlighting that they made current antibrmer personnel available for interviews and untarily provided the overwhelming majority of INT's exhibits.
